NURSING DIAGNOSIS IN PALLIATIVE CARE
The use of the ICNP® Catalogue "Palliative care for a dignified dying" to compare nursing diagnosis between specialized palliative care hospital support and home care teams

Sandra Martins Pereira¹; Emília Fradique²; Ana Júlia Silva³; Pablo Hernandez-Materra⁴

Nurses are key players in palliative care teams. They identify nursing diagnosis and fulfill intervention to promote patients' well-being and family support. Differences and similarities can be identified in nursing practice across different care settings. In what refers to specialized palliative care teams who provide specialized palliative nursing care, specificities can be found in the patients' and family carers' needs. Therefore, it might be expected that nursing diagnosis vary according to the place and type of specialized palliative care is provided.

AIM: • To compare nursing diagnosis identified in patients cared by two different palliative care teams, a specialized hospital support team and a specialized home care team.

METHOD: • A longitudinal study was conducted both in a specialized hospital support team and in a specialized home care team during one month in Portugal. • Data were collected using a nursing diagnosis identification instrument: The International Classification for Nursing Practice Catalogue, ICNP® Catalogue "Palliative care for a dignified dying". • The study included a total of 22 patients, all of them diagnosed with cancer. • Data about the identified nursing diagnosis were compared afterwards.

RESULTS

Nursing Diagnosis	Specialized Palliative Care Team
	Hospital support team	Home care team
	Number of validations (N)
Suffering	30	8
Spiritual distress	24	-
Impaired ability to both	26	-
Impaired ability to clean the house	22	-
Impaired ability to dress/undress	20	-
Discomfort	15	-
Anxiety	15	-
Feelings of powerlessness	14	-
Caregiver's stress	14	14
Social isolation	14	-
Fatigue	9	37
Pain	8	11
Compromised skin integrity	-	26
Lack of knowledge about medication regimen	-	25
Compromised family process	-	21
Compromised family coping	-	21
Hopelessness	-	11
Lack of knowledge about treatment regimen	-	9

CONCLUSIONS

The study indicates that similar nursing diagnoses were identified in both types of teams (fatigue, pain, suffering and caregiver's stress), although with different frequencies. Also, it concludes that specificities about nursing diagnosis were identified by considering the typology of palliative care teams. Further studies are needed to better understand nursing diagnosis in palliative care.
